

We believe expense tracking isn't enough, if your money habits are still crap

How it Started

Vero was built by five Gen Z founders from different countries and economic backgrounds, united by one belief: our generation doesn't have a financial knowledge problem - it has a behavioural one.

And behaviour is far harder to change, especially in a system designed to work against you...

Today's digital economy makes spending effortless. One-click checkouts, targeted ads, and doomscrolling encourage small decisions that quietly trap you into a cycle of impulse spending, guilt, and stress.

Impulse

£8 on daily ice matcha latte (or whatever trends next) turns into £2,800 wasted per year.

Guilt

Nearly half of Gen Z adults avoid checking their bank accounts

Stress

70% of Gen Z lose sleep because of money worries

Despite the rise of budgeting apps and digital banking tools, financial discipline remains largely unsolved. Most platforms only show where your money went, not how to change what happens next. Others reward spending with cashback, points, and incentives - reinforcing the very behaviour users are trying to control.

Why Vero Exists

Our Mission ▼

Mission

Empower Gen Z to take control of their financial future, helping them build money habits that last.

Our Vision ▼

Vision

Become the go-to financial wellbeing platform where young people feel in control of their money

Vero was created to help Gen Z build lasting financial habits through AI-powered personalised gamification - turning everyday financial decisions into small challenges that encourage discipline and reward progress.

By supporting young people to build savings, spend more mindfully, and reduce financial stress, Vero contributes to three key UN Sustainable Development Goals.

Face Side -

SDG 3+
Health & Wellbeing

Reducing financial stress and its impact on mental wellbeing.

SDG 4+
Quality Education

Embedding practical financial literacy into everyday life.

SDG 10+
Responsible Consumption

Encouraging mindful spending and sustainable consumption habits.

Our Impact

After testing our MVP with 50 active early adopters over one month, we observed encouraging early signals:

82%

reported feeling more in control of their money

64%

said expense tracking became easier to stick to 55%

maintained a 7+ day tracking streak

42%

reported improvements in their financial stress levels

I used to record my spending on sheets, but it's so much easier to type the message to a cute elephant, instead.

— Anna, 24

Rewards motivate me the most, especially grocery vouchers - they actually help me save even more.

— Elly, 25

I started sticking with expense tracking because it feels like a game. As someone with ADHD, I didn't expect that

— Arvin, 21

Insights are still basic in this version, but they show me how much my small purchases add up - I started thinking twice before buying.

— Bevis, 22

Our Values

Grounded in empathy

We listen first, build second. Every feature starts with users, not market trends

Reframe Constraints

We treat constraints as creative sparks, reframing problems into new possibilities

Implement Fast

We test ideas early and challenge defaults. Speed is our ally in learning

Take Imperfect Steps

We move forward 1% better each day. Mistakes are important for growth!
